

Just finished your video? Check it before you send it.

There are many moving parts in a screencast video. Not only is your sound being recorded, but often your webcam, along with the applications on your screen.

Consider the following checks before sharing your shiny new video with your students:

- Do a Privacy Check
  - Scrub through your video from beginning to end. Does your video include any personal or private information which you did not intend to capture?
  - If so, you may want to consider trimming, editing, or re-recording that content before sharing it with your students.
- Do a Sound Check
  - Is your voice loud enough?
  - Is your voice clear enough?
  - Are there any distractions in the audio?
